

Erika M. Andrews

Erika Andrews is currently a Change Management Organization Development Specialist in Marshall Space Flight Center's (NASA) Office of Human Capital. She joined the team in April of 2007 after spending almost a year in Marshall's Office of Strategic Analysis and Communications.

Mrs. Andrews is a graduate of Temple University's (Philadelphia, PA) School of Communications and Theater. After receiving her BA in Communications, Erika went on to receive her MSA in Education Administration from Lincoln University (Philadelphia, PA). She currently teaches at Oakwood College in the Communications department and is doing Organizational Development coursework at George Washington University (Washington, D.C.).

Erika has worked with such telecommunications organizations as AOL, Comcast, SES Americom, and Starz Encore LLC in various marketing, communications, human resources and operation functions. In addition, has been a consultant with the African American Education Center (NJ) for over 10 years and has served as Philadelphia Chapter president and national member-at-large of the National Association of Multi-Ethnicity in Communications.

A native of New Jersey, Erika enjoys being a volunteer at Girl's Inc., traveling, music, theater, golf and spending time with her family soaking up their new experience of living in Huntsville.
